

What Are You Getting From This?

5 Questions For Self-Assessment

1. Including the major, do peer advisors, professional advisors/counselors, and faculty advisors work hand in hand (this must be accepted by all parties and systematic) to do all initial advising for new students?
2. Does the campus have an advising policy supported by the campus (e.g. academic senate policy) that prioritizes a successful intervention for all new students?
3. How many offices/department/programs are involved in both the implementation AND planning of new student orientations? List them.
4. Have you “harnessed” technology to your advantage and are you clear that what you are still doing therefore is practical and effective?
5. What (exactly) is your REALLY BIG STICK or CARROT that encourages student participation in new student orientations and how do you “tailor” the event to meet their expectations?
