- Hollywood is practically synonymous with the film and television industry, and CSU is a critical supplier of job-ready graduates in this industry. CSU Fullerton’s Art Department has teamed with both the Disney Company and Warner Brothers Feature Animation to offer a highly regarded program in entertainment art/animation. Its theater and dance graduates go on to careers in television, in film, and on Broadway and regional stages. The Mihaylo College of Business and Economics has the only undergraduate program in California that offers a concentration focused on the business/management side of entertainment and tourism.
• CSU helps build California’s schools by being the primary source of teacher education in the state. One reason that CSU succeeds in teacher education is because its programs have strong linkages with local school districts. For example, CSU Fullerton has student teaching contracts with 83 public school districts. A partnership between CSU Fullerton and the Orange County Department of Education includes paraprofessional, intern, induction, and district collaborations.

• California’s biotechnology industry is perhaps the largest in the world, and its health care industry is enormous. CSU Fullerton’s Center for Applied Biotechnology Studies is contributing to a new generation of scientists in this arena. With a $1.6 million nursing simulation lab and expanded nursing programs, CSU Fullerton is also bolstering the ranks of nurses. It is the only campus in California that offers the Master of Science in Nursing with a concentration in school nursing, the School Nurse Services Credential, and the Special Teaching Authorization in Health as an online program.

• The CSU campuses, including CSU Fullerton, have long helped communities and regions understand their economies, population trends, industries, and social and community issues. CSU Fullerton’s wide range of institutes include the Center for Demographic Research, Social Science Research Center, Institute for Economic and Environmental Studies, Center for Corporate Reporting and Governance, Real Estate and Land Use Institute, Center for Insurance Studies, Center for International Business, Center for the Study of Economics of Aging and Health, Center for Entrepreneurship, Center for the Study of Emerging Markets, Sales Leadership Center, Catalyst Center for the Advancement of Teaching and Learning in Mathematics, and the Gianneschi Center for Nonprofit Research.

“Cal State Fullerton is a truly integrated institution of higher learning. It helps lead the nation in recruiting, retaining, and graduating students from historically underrepresented populations, including many who are the first in their family to earn a college degree.”
