

California State University, Channel Islands

Contribution Highlights:

- The Nursing Program received over half a million dollars from the California Endowment to partner with community organizations and schools to encourage students from diverse backgrounds to pursue careers in nursing.
- The Bernard Osher Foundation endowed the Osher Lifelong Learning Institute (OLLI) with $1 million. OLLI provides a distinctive array of non-credit courses and activities specifically developed for adults age 50 or older who pursue education simply for the joy of learning.
- Four hundred guests attended the President's Dinner, raising $130,000 in unrestricted funds for the university's highest priority needs.
- A $200,000 National Science Foundation grant will support a week-long workshop utilizing molecular structure determination instrumentation via the Intranet as a cost-effective approach to providing outstanding science, technology, engineering and mathematics (STEM) education. The project facility was created with funding from the Amgen Foundation.
