Campus Descriptions

California State University, Bakersfield (1965)

Since classes were first offered in 1970, two strong traditions have emerged at Cal State Bakersfield: an extraordinary degree of student-faculty interaction and the development of a highly personalized learning atmosphere. The Schools of Arts and Sciences, Business and Public Administration, and Education offer 31 bachelor’s and 13 master’s degree programs, including petroleum geology, biology with agriculture emphasis, computer science, land resource management, health care management, and accredited degree programs in business, public administration, education, nursing, and clinical science. CSUB offers students a range of extracurricular and social activities, including sororities and fraternities, special interest organizations, and student government. The Roadrunner sports teams have brought home national championships in men’s swimming, wrestling, basketball and soccer and women’s softball. The campus is situated on a 375-acre site in southwest Bakersfield. Campus landmarks include the Dore Theater, Todd Madigan Art Gallery, a nine-lane artificial surface track, a softball diamond, the John S. Hillman Aquatic Center with an Olympic-size pool, the John B. Antonio Wrestling Sport Center, a 4,000-seat special events center, outdoor amphitheater, the Walter W. Stiern Library, the Student Union and a new music building. • 9001 Stockdale Highway, Bakersfield, California 93311-1099 (661) 664-2011.

California State University, Chico (1887)

Situated on the Sacramento Valley floor where it rises to the western slopes of the Sierra Nevada foothills, California State University, Chico offers a rich blend of tradition and innovation. One of California’s oldest public institutions, CSU Chico has emerged from a Normal School to a comprehensive university with more than 100 degree programs and options and a national reputation for its achievements in the liberal arts and sciences and applied technology. This unique residential campus attracts 80 percent of its students from California’s metropolitan areas who come to enjoy a combination of challenging academic courses, abundant recreational pursuits in nearby waterways and mountains, and the sense of intimacy and belonging that pervades the campus and community. CSU Chico is noted for its significant record of placing its graduates in professional employment, for its rate of degree completion, and for its academic innovation, particularly in telecommunications, that include a state-of-the-art satellite capability. • 1st Street and Normal Avenue, Chico, California 95929 — (530) 898-6116.

California State University, Dominguez Hills (1960)

Located in the heart of the Los Angeles Basin, CSU Dominguez Hills gives students an attractive alternative to the large, and sometimes overcrowded, university experience. With more than 800 faculty members serving approximately 12,300 students, class sizes are relatively small, and students are able to get individual attention from professors when they need it. Offering bachelor’s and master’s degree programs in more than 50 major areas, CSU Dominguez Hills has a wide range of classes within its College of Arts & Sciences, School of Education, School of Health, and School of Management. The university is particularly noted for its unique programs in the health and clinical sciences; its School of Education, which is nationally recognized for its urban teacher training; and the Statewide Nursing Program, which enrolls more students than any other nursing program in the nation. The 346-acre campus is situated on what was formerly Rancho San Pedro, the oldest Spanish land grant in the Los Angeles area. While providing many of the advantages of an urban university, Dominguez Hills also provides the quiet contemplative environment of a rural campus. CSU Dominguez Hills is committed to its people, to the urban community in which it is located, and to the concept that higher learning is not something in which only a few, for economic or social reasons, can be productive participants. • 1000 East Victoria Street, Carson, California 90747 — (310) 243-3300.

California State University, Fresno (1911)

Fresno State offers 57 baccalaureate degree majors, master’s degrees in 40 fields of study and a joint doctorate in educational leadership with the University of California. The programs have two objectives: the student’s self-understanding and preparation for a career. Nearly all the programs provide practical career applications of classroom knowledge. In addition to outstanding offerings in the arts, sciences, and humanities, the Fresno campus enjoys a long-standing reputation of excellence in agriculture, business, education, engineering, and professional areas such as nursing, industrial technology, social work and urban planning. Three national parks — Yosemite, Kings Canyon and Sequoia — are within a short drive and provide numerous educational and recreational opportunities. The city offers cultural and social advantages typical of an urban center without the congestion. Located in the heart of the state, this campus is convenient to all major points in California. • Shaw and Cedar Avenues, Fresno, California 93740 — (559) 278-4240.

California State University, Fullerton (1957)

Orange County, known for both its high-tech industries and recreational attractions, is the setting for Fullerton’s main campus and the Mission Viejo satellite campus. Through its seven schools, the university offers 51 bachelor’s degree and 45 master’s degree programs as well as various credential and certificate programs. The schools are: the arts, business administration and economics, communications, engineering and computer science, human development and community service, humanities and social sciences, and natural science and mathematics. The university is fully accredited and enjoys national recognition for its array of traditional academic programs and an extensive list of independently accredited professional programs, including art, athletics training, business, chemistry, communications, communicative disorders, computer science, dance, engineering, music, nursing, public... administration, teacher education, and theater. More than 90 percent of the full-time tenured and tenure-track faculty possess a doctorate or its equivalent. The 225-acre main campus includes the Fullerton Arboretum with its 1894 Heritage House, which stands in sharp contrast to the modern high-rise features of the other Fullerton buildings. • Fullerton, California 92834-9480 — (714) 278-2011.

California State University, Hayward (1957)

The university is located on 342 acres in the Hayward foothills overlooking San Francisco Bay. Major instructional facilities include those devoted to music, business, fine arts, education, mass communications, physical education, and the sciences. Other facilities for the 12,500 students include a 500-seat theatre with computerized lighting and sound equipment, an 8,400-square-foot television studio complex, a student health center, the University Union, and an apartment complex for more than 400 students. A new bookstore opened in 1996. Cal State Hayward is organized into four schools: arts, letters and social sciences; business and economics; education and allied studies; and science. The Contra Costa Campus in Concord provides full instructional support for more than 1,500 upper division and graduate students. The university offers 37 baccalaureate majors, 63 minors, and master’s degrees in 25 fields. The university is preparing for the challenges of the 21st century with new approaches, such as a master’s degree program in multimedia, a major investment in distance learning facilities, and creation of the Center for Microscopy and Imaging. An international campus with students from 50 countries, Cal State Hayward’s global reach includes the MBA programs offered in Hong Kong, Vienna, Beijing and Moscow. • Hayward, California 94542 — (510) 885-3000.

Humboldt State University (1913)

Set between redwood groves and the Pacific Ocean, 270 miles north of San Francisco, Humboldt State is a campus of choice, not convenience. The northernmost, westernmost university in the CSU, Humboldt tends to attract students from afar who are more adventurous and self-reliant. The natural setting and small class sizes foster close faculty-student relationships. Undergraduates enjoy uncommon privileges: students have broad access to computers, laboratories, art studios and facilities (including Humboldt’s greenhouse, marine laboratory and natural history museum). They have more chances for public expression in creative arts and humanities through the student news media, the Student Access Gallery, dramatic productions, recitals and competitive debates. From anthropology to zoology, students can play a major role in research. Despite its size and remoteness—or perhaps because of them—Humboldt State is known for academic excellence, as evidenced by high postgraduate and professional test scores. Humboldt students also take, on the average, the heaviest course load in the CSU. Though the atmosphere and lifestyle are casual, faculty take seriously their personal commitment to helping students advance along a rigorous scholarly trail. Humboldt ranks 47th nationally in the percentage of graduates who later earn doctorates in science. Humboldt, long renowned for its science and natural resources curricula, has strengthened its academic diversity. Over the last decade, its programs in the fine arts, business, social sciences and humanities have earned national distinction. In the close-knit community of the North Coast (which offers weather much like the San Francisco Bay Area), students learn they can help others; and they do, through programs for senior citizens, recycling, science outreach, legal counseling, health education and other concerns. The depth of the social and global responsibility that the university fosters in its students can be gauged by the Peace Corps’ record of recruiting on campus, one of the highest in the country. • Arcata, California 95521 — (707) 826-3011.

California State University, Long Beach (1949)

CSU Long Beach offers its students a learning environment based on effective instruction and faculty involvement in scholarly and creative activity; a broad range of academic offerings; a location near the major international business center of the Pacific Rim and extensive recreational resources; a student-oriented administration; and a diverse student body representing 50 states and 115 foreign nations. CSULB is the first state university to offer full scholarships to California high school valedictorians and National Merit finalists and semifinalists through its President’s Scholars program. Strong departmental student associations further a close student-faculty relationship for which the university has been known since its founding. A pioneering Learning Assistance Center and a major disabled services program help assure student success. A chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, the nation’s oldest and most prestigious undergraduate honorary society, is among the numerous honor and professional societies which acknowledge the university’s academic excellence and commitment to the liberal arts as well as to strong professional schools. CSULB also interacts with the Southern California community it serves through dozens of internship and cooperative education programs which involve thousands of students each year. • 1250 Bellflower Boulevard, Long Beach, California 90840 — (562) 985-4111.

California State University, Los Angeles (1947)

Cal State L.A. is a recognized leader in providing quality higher education. Since 1947, more than 120,000 students, many the first in their families to attend college, have graduated and gone on to successful careers. Five miles east of the city’s cultural and civic center, and immediately adjacent to freeways, buses and commuter rail service, the green, hilltop campus provides views of the San Gabriel mountains to the north and the downtown skyline to the south. A reputation for academic excellence and professional training attracts students from all areas of the United States and over 100 countries. More than one quarter of the 19,000 students are engaged in postbaccalaureate study. Cal State L.A. is organized into six schools that offer programs in more than 50 academic and professional fields. Internships and cooperative education programs enable students to gain practical experience in business, government, and community agencies. The new Luckman Fine Arts Complex enriches art offerings to the campus and Southern California communities. A wide array of campus lectures, art exhibits, performances, campus activities and athletic competitions enhance an active student life program. Garden-style apartments with recreational facilities and planned activities provide up to 1,000 students with an on-campus residence community. • 5151 State University Drive, Los Angeles, California 90032 — (213) 343-3000. Web: www.calstatela.edu.

California Maritime Academy (1929)

Established by the state legislature in 1929 as the California Nautical School, the California Maritime Academy (CMA) became an independent state institution of higher education in 1972. While continuing its role in the preparation of students for the maritime industry, CMA joined the CSU as a campus in 1995. This residential campus is located on 67 acres of land adjacent to the Carquinez Strait at the northeastern extreme of San Francisco Bay. A deepwater pier provides berthing space for the training ship Golden Bear and a basin for boats. Two residence halls, library facilities, engineering resources, classrooms, a gymnasium, recreation facilities, and other student life centers are available as well as several computerized simulators for training. The 400 students regularly attending Academy classes on the semester calendar are taught by approximately 60 faculty. CMA offers academic programs leading to bachelor of science degrees in engineering, technology, business, and marine transportation. Graduates of Cal Maritime can earn a merchant marine officer’s license and a commission as an ensign in the U. S. Naval Reserve. • P.O. Box 1392, Vallejo, California 94590 — (707) 648-4200.

California State University, Monterey Bay (1994)

CSU Monterey Bay, the 21st campus of the CSU system, was created to address the needs of students and society in the 21st century. CSUMB, located on some 1,350 acres of the former Fort Ord Army Base, is committed to educating and serving the diverse people of California. It offers bachelor’s and master’s degrees in arts and science as well as teaching credentials. The curricula is outcome-based and student and society-centered, with service to the community one of the highest priorities. The programs of instruction strive for distinction and build on regional assets in areas such as the sciences (marine, atmospheric, and environmental); visual and performing arts and related humanities; language, culture, and international studies; education; business; and studies of human behavior, information, and community. CSUMB also believes in investing for the future through integrated and experimental use of technologies. The university is committed to a multilingual, multicultural intellectual community distinguished by partnerships with other institutions around Monterey Bay and beyond. The campus opened in fall 1995 with some 650 students and 42 full-time faculty. By fall 1998, CSUMB will have approximately 1,800 students and over 100 full-time faculty. By the year 2030, the university expects to enroll some 25,000 students, many of whom will be nontraditional, taking classes electronically. CSUMB is a residential campus, with the majority of students, staff and faculty residing on the campus. • 100 Campus Center, Seaside, California 93955-8001 — (831) 582-3330.

California State University, Northridge (1958)

Located on a 353-acre campus 21 miles north of Los Angeles, California State University, Northridge is one of the largest universities in the Los Angeles area. It primarily serves residents of the San Fernando Valley and nearby areas. Its 1,400 faculty members teach a population of about 27,000 students. A satellite campus serves Ventura County residents. New facilities containing state-of-the-art equipment include complexes for the College of Business Administration and Economics and the College of Education. The university is undergoing a thorough renovation that will make it one of the most modern campuses in the nation. Cal State Northridge comprises eight colleges: arts, media, and communication; business administration and economics; education; engineering and computer sciences; health and human development; humanities; science and mathematics; and social and behavioral sciences. Degrees are offered in 51 undergraduate and 44 master’s programs, with 30 credentials offered in teaching, supervision, administration, and various specializations. Home to the National Center on Deafness, the campus has the largest number of deaf students of any U.S. university west of the Mississippi. Cal State Northridge’s pioneering Student Success Program provides personal, face-to-face advising to help students choose their courses and plan their degree program. • 1811 Nordhoff Street, Northridge, California 91330 — (818) 677-1200.

California State Polytechnic University, Pomona (1938)

Cal Poly Pomona has embarked upon a number of initiatives to meet the challenges of a changing demographic profile and a new era in public higher education. These initiatives are focusing on improving and streamlining the university’s operations; improving the teaching and learning environment; building the campus’s technological infrastructure; increasing external funding; diversifying the campus; and increasing outreach activities locally and internationally. The 1,438-acre campus was founded in 1938 on the site of the former Voorhis School for Boys in San Dimas. In 1956 the university moved to its present site on the former W. K. Kellogg Arabian horse ranch. Six colleges (agriculture, arts, business administration, engineering, environmental design, and science) and two schools (education and hotel and restaurant management) offer 61 undergraduate and 15 graduate degrees, as well as six credential programs. While earning academic credit, students apply classroom and laboratory education through service as interns and consultants working with city and county governmental agencies, business, and industry; raising crops; and managing livestock — all part of the university’s “learn by doing” philosophy. The campus houses the Center for Regenerative Studies where students and faculty live and study the environment. It also manages LandLab, a center for education and research in the sustainable use of resources. • 3801 West Temple Avenue, Pomona, California 91768-4013 — (909) 869-POLY.

California State University, Sacramento (1947)

California’s Capital University is located on a tree-lined site, alongside the historic American River, five miles east of downtown Sacramento. The university celebrated its 50th anniversary in the 1997-98 academic year. The campus will host the U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials in 2000. Student internships, part-time and career employment opportunities are plentiful in Sacramento, the seat of government of the nation’s most populous state. Sacramento is known for its quality of life and its healthy economic and employment conditions. Recreational activities abound in Sacramento and nearby locations such as the Lake Tahoe/Sierra region and the San Francisco Bay Area. CSU Sacramento academic programs lead to bachelor’s and master’s degrees in more than 70 fields, including the liberal arts and sciences, and in professional-level programs such as engineering, computer science, business administration, and nursing. Students have diverse ethnic and cultural backgrounds and represent nearly 100 foreign countries.
More than 200 student organizations and a student government with an annual budget of more than $2 million invite the activity-oriented student. • 6000 J Street, Sacramento, California 95819 — (916) 278-6011.

California State University, San Bernardino (1960)

Cal State San Bernardino spreads across 430 scenic acres in the foothills of the San Bernardino Mountains above the city of San Bernardino. Students enjoy the personal attention of faculty afforded by small classes and the opportunities for self-paced, independent, and internship study. Bachelor’s degree programs are offered in 42 majors in the humanities, social sciences, natural sciences, interdisciplinary studies, and career-oriented fields.
Twenty master’s degrees are offered in administration, biology, computer science, criminal justice, education, English composition, health services administration, mathematics teaching, national security studies, rehabilitation counseling, social sciences, social work and urban planning. Many classes are offered in the late-day and evening hours so that working people may complete a college degree while maintaining a job. Courses also are offered at a variety of off-campus locations, including a permanent satellite campus in Palm Desert. On-campus student life is enhanced by residential housing, Greek social fraternities and sororities, and 10 intercollegiate sports. Accessible from most inland freeways, the campus is within short driving distance of Ontario Airport, mountain ski resorts, Los Angeles, and the beaches.
• 5500 University Parkway, San Bernardino, California 92407-2397 —
(909) 880-5002.

San Diego State University (1897)

San Diego State University has been putting education to work for its students and its region since 1897. The campus combines good teaching with an unusually successful faculty research effort to produce a unique climate for students. SDSU is a major urban institution offering a wide range of academic choices, with bachelor’s degrees in 74 areas and master’s degrees in 54 areas.
In cooperation with other institutions, SDSU jointly grants doctoral degrees in biology, chemistry, education, psychology, engineering mechanics, mathematics and science education, ecology, geochemistry, and public health. The respected faculty works directly with students and encourages departmental loyalties which serve to personalize the large campus. The student body offers a diversity of ethnic and geographic backgrounds. The accomplished student government operates a variety of activities and services which supplement academic life. The campus offers an extensive program of cultural activities and is the home of San Diego’s public radio and television stations. Aztec athletics are a big part of the city’s sports calendar. • 5300 Campanile Drive, San Diego, California 92182 (619) 594-5000.

San Francisco State University (1899)

San Francisco State University is located in one of the world’s great cities. Since its beginnings almost 100 years ago, the university has distinguished itself as an inventive and constantly changing academic institution. Its faculty are committed teachers first, but they are also active scholars, creating and leading programs that demonstrate the university’s special qualities: its active involvement with the community as a partner in the solution of problems. More than 100 centers and institutes, dealing with such issues as homelessness, inner city schools, teen health and counseling, small business success, and environmental restoration give faculty and students a chance to apply their talents and academic knowledge to real-life challenges. SFSU’s 27,000 students increasingly reflect the changing demographics of California, and the university takes pride in its national ranking in producing ethnic minority university graduates. Students can choose from 115 bachelor’s and 93 master’s degree programs. Two joint doctorates in education are also offered. • 1600 Holloway Avenue, San Francisco, California 94132 — (415) 338-1111.

San Jose State University (1857)

Founded in 1857, San Jose State University was the public institution of higher education on the West Coast. Now it’s the metropolitan university serving Silicon Valley, poised for the 21st century. Combining a proud history with an innovative future, SJSU broadly educates leaders and professionals for an increasingly complex and global society. SJSU has aided the development of the information age and Silicon Valley by providing the largest number of engineering, science and business graduates to the area’s high-tech companies. SJSU also provides the professional infrastructure for the region — teachers, social workers, artists, and nurses — offering more than 190 degree choices. Networking and access to Silicon Valley technology are integral to many majors. Alumni report that abundant internships, cooperative and work experiences helped launch their careers. SJSU attention to student success begins early, with student services designed to meet the needs of a mobile, diverse community. Tenured faculty teach introductory as well as advanced courses with an emphasis on small classes. • One Washington Square, San Jose, California 95192-0001 — (408) 924-1000.

California Polytechnic State University, San Luis Obispo (1901)

Cal Poly San Luis Obispo, midway between Los Angeles and San Francisco and 10 miles from the Pacific, has built a solid national reputation on a practical, hands-on, “learn by doing” approach to education. With 58 bachelor’s and 18 master’s degree programs, the university is especially known for its applied technical and professional programs in agriculture, architecture, business, computer science, design, engineering, graphic communication, and science. These areas and Cal Poly’s excellent programs in liberal arts, mathematics, teacher education, and other professional fields offer small classes and individual attention as well as a thorough general education. The university also provides its students a variety of opportunities for campus and community activities, work experience, and overseas study. Cal Poly and the city of San Luis Obispo share a friendly, small-campus, small-town feeling and one of the finest natural environments anywhere. The city and campus are surrounded by majestic peaks and quiet valleys, with sparkling-clear air, a climate that’s temperate year-round, and many recreational possibilities close at hand. • San Luis Obispo, California 93407 — (805) 756-1111.

California State University, San Marcos (1989)

California State University, San Marcos, one of the CSU’s newest campuses, is set on 304 rolling acres in the scenic foothills of north San Diego County, a short drive from some of Southern California’s finest beaches and just an hour from the U.S.-Mexico border. CSUSM’s growing core of programs currently includes 19 bachelor’s degrees, 7 master’s degrees and 15 teacher credentialing programs within its three colleges: business administration, arts & sciences, and education. With an enrollment of approximately 4,700 students, CSUSM offers the academic resources of a large university with the close and congenial environment of a private institution. Classes are small, facilitating close associations between classmates and faculty members. And the campus’s newness means students have access to modern science and computer labs featuring some of the finest equipment available today. CSUSM’s ultimate mission is to prepare men and women to assume productive leadership roles in an increasingly diverse society. That leadership preparation is accomplished through coursework that includes global awareness; computer literacy and competency; second language proficiency; and writing. • San Marcos, California 92096-0001 — (760) 750-4000.

Sonoma State University (1960)

Sonoma offers a distinctive education in the liberal arts and sciences. The university’s excellent academic programs, distinguished faculty, and close-knit campus community combine to give students a rich and enduring educational experience. SSU offers traditional majors in the arts and humanities, natural sciences, and social sciences, as well as business, economics, computer science, and other outstanding professional programs. In all, students have a choice of 39 bachelor’s degrees, 13 master’s degrees, and 11 educational credential programs. Small classes, personalized advising, and close associations with professors enhance the education students receive at Sonoma State University and lay the foundation for a lifetime of learning and achievement. The 225-acre campus is located in a region of Northern California which is rural but not remote. The nearby city of Santa Rosa offers the conveniences of a metropolitan community, while the excitement of San Francisco, the romance of the Napa and Sonoma wine country, and the grandeur of the Pacific Coast redwood forests and Sonoma coast are all within easy reach of the campus. • 1801 East Cotati Avenue, Rohnert Park, California 94928 — (707) 664-2880.

California State University, Stanislaus (1957)

CSU Stanislaus provides a friendly learning environment, small class sizes, and an accessible, teaching-oriented faculty that fosters creativity and excellence in the educational process. The campus consistently ranks as one of the safest state universities, and, with its tree-lined grounds, as one of the most attractive. Noted for its strong programs in business, the performing and fine arts, education, and liberal arts, Stanislaus offers over 70 degree major and minor programs. Undergraduate and graduate degree programs are provided through the College of Arts, Letters, and Science; the School of Business Administration; and the School of Education, which has several strong credential programs. Master’s degrees include those in business, education, public administration, science, and the humanities. Preprofessional programs are available in law and a variety of medical fields. The university serves over 6,200 students from throughout California, the United States, and many nations, and it values their diverse cultural and ethnic backgrounds. The campus is located in the heart of the Central Valley, midway between San Francisco and Yosemite. Its commitment to service in its assigned six-county, 10,000-square-mile region, is evidenced by award-winning outreach efforts. These include an Instructional Television Network broadcasting to several communities, and the Multi-Campus Regional Center, serving a growing San Joaquin County. • 801 West Monte Vista Avenue, Turlock, California 95380 — (209) 667-3122.

Outstanding Professor Awards

Shortly after the creation of the system, the Board of Trustees began sponsorship of a program to select Outstanding Professors from the system’s campuses with participation by the Statewide Academic Senate. Two designations are approved annually. The Board of Directors of the California State University Foundation, utilizing funds from the Joseph M. Schenck Foundation of Los Angeles arranged for by former Trustee Gregston Bautzer, presented $4,000 awards to each of the Outstanding Professors.

The following is a list of all the recipients of the awards since its sponsorship:
