

The benefits of estate planning

One of the many benefits of your Legal Plan

Seventy percent of Americans don't have a will¹, the most basic estate planning document you need to protect your assets and your family's future.

If you have assets you wish to leave behind, want to take control of healthcare decisions, or if you have young children, you should consider what estate planning documents you need.

There are several components to an estate plan that are covered with your legal plan:

Will: A will ensures that your property will be distributed and your family will be cared for exactly as you wish. Without a will, the courts may decide how your property is distributed.

Living Trust: A living trust allows you to distribute your assets and property while you are still alive, and may reduce the amount of taxes you may have to pay.

Living Will: This document specifies the types of medical treatments you want in the event that you become unable to express those wishes directly. A living will not only ensures that you get the care you want, but protects your loved ones from making difficult decisions on your behalf.

Durable Power of Attorney: In the event you become incapacitated, this document allows you to designate someone you trust to make decisions on your behalf.

Probate Avoidance Documents: Keep your home out of the probate process and have it pass directly to the beneficiaries of your choosing with either a transfer on death deed or revocable living trust, depending on your state.

You can meet with an attorney to discuss your estate plan and have them prepare the documents you need, or you can use our digital estate planning service to complete wills, living wills and powers of attorney online in as little as 15 minutes.

Consider this real member story⁴

"My spouse and I decided it was time to do our estate planning. Our attorney in San Francisco made the process easy. He listened to us, what we wanted and made great recommendations on how we can best plan for the future. He explained in simple language all the documents that we were signing."

Even if you only use the legal plan once in a year, the plan will likely pay for itself. MetLife Legal Plans also provides coverage for many other personal legal matters — such as real estate, civil litigation defense and identity theft.
