Measuring Advancement

Mr. Garrett P. Ashley, vice chancellor university relations and advancement provided background information stating that in March 2005, the Board of Trustees adopted a set of four guiding principles that measures the productivity of, and investment in advancement operations. The principles emphasized the development of a comprehensive program and recognized performance as it relates to funding. With the guidance of these principles, the chancellor and campus presidents develop annual goals and performance review recommendations.

Since 2008, advancement program budgets have been reduced by $2.8 million resulting in campuses with fewer staff and numerous interim vice president positions. Despite these tremendous budget cuts, the campus presidents and their teams have continued to develop a culture of philanthropy. He noted several of the synergy projects underway to improve program success and manage budget cuts. He requested that Lori A. Redfearn, assistant vice chancellor, advancement services provide an overview of the campus university advancement goals.

Inst. Adv.

Ms. Redfearn explained the advancement classification model which is used as a tool in measuring advancement: campuses are divided into three peer groups that take into consideration the maturity of a campus advancement program based on the number of full time professional fundraisers, endowment market value, and the number of individual donors.

Ms. Redfearn began her presentation by stating that overall the CSU exceeded its fundraising goals for 2010-11, and within the past three years, averaging the figures, have reached the 100 percent goal. Projections for next year indicate that six campuses expect to raise less, seven campuses are expected to raise the same amount, and ten campuses anticipate growth. The aggregated total goal is down about $5 million for years 2012-13.

Ms. Redfearn demonstrated the relationship between the decline in full-time fundraising professionals, dollars invested and dollars raised as the recession hit and the years that followed. The outcomes had a 92 percent correlation to the investments. The ratio of each dollar invested resulted in $6 raised. She informed the group that as a system, the three-year average cost to raise a dollar remains at $.015-$0.16, which is within the favorable range of $0.15 and $0.25.

Trustee Fong commented that the 1:6 ratio was impressive and asked whether a larger investment would result in a similar return. Ms. Redfearn responded that the simple answer is yes, however, it's not immediate and comes from steady increases in investment over time. Trustee Guzman inquired about how our results compare nationally. Ms. Redfearn explained that national data is calculated according to gift receipts as opposed to gift commitments. On that basis the CSU average return on gift receipts is about $5.75, which is consistent with master's institutions nationally.

Trustee Guzman adjourned the meeting.

Naming of a Facility—California Polytechnic State University, San Luis Obispo

Presentation by:

Garrett P. Ashley
Vice Chancellor
University Relations and Advancement

Summary

This item will consider naming the Dairy Science building in the College of Agriculture, Food and Environmental Sciences as the Leprino Foods Dairy Innovation Institute.

This proposal, submitted by California Polytechnic State University, San Luis Obispo, meets the criteria and other conditions specified in the Board of Trustees Policy on Naming California State University Facilities and Properties, including approval by the system review panel and the campus academic senate executive committee.

Background

The Dairy Science building, a one-story structure comprised of dairy science laboratories, a conference room, processing plant and associated facilities totaling 18,000 square feet is located northwest of the campus core in the university's agricultural land.

The proposed naming of the facility recognizes the $5 million commitment from Leprino Foods Company of Denver, the world's largest producer of mozzarella cheese. This gift will allow Cal Poly's College of Agriculture, Food and Environmental Sciences to enhance the Dairy Science Department by creating an endowed chair in dairy foods who will serve as program director of the new Master's of Professional Studies in Dairy Foods.

In recognition of Leprino Foods Company's support of the College of Agriculture, Food and Environmental Sciences in general, and the Dairy Science Department directly, it is recommended to name the facility the Leprino Foods Dairy Innovation Institute.
