

Rough Seas Ahead: Announcing Changes On your Campus

A STORY

WHO

WHEN

WHAT

HOW

YOUR TROUBLED WATERS

WHERE

WHY

YOUR JOURNEY

A story about dirt.

Marketing Communications +
Crisis Communications +
Public Relations + Change Management +
a dollop of psychology =

CHANGE COMMUNICATIONS

What about your campus?

People don't like ANY type of change.

Change elicits an emotional response

because of the transition to a new state.

Communication equips your audience to make the transition

but they still have to paddle.

Gigantic Campus Initiative

To-Do List

1. Envision amazing new project
2. Set up campuswide committees
3. Define project specifics
4. Arrange funding sources and budget
5. Create multi-year implementation plan
6. Send an email out

IRONY

Item #71994

The strategy for communications is just as important as the strategy for the initiative.

WHO

Who Is Affected?

Who Should Send Messages?

Map out the groups of people who will be impacted, and their expected level of disruption

Suppose your mascot changed

THE TUSSLING TAPIRS

What groups are impacted?

What is their level of disruption?

WHERE

Personal Delivery

Media
Mix

Personal Delivery Options

- One-on-one meeting
- Department meeting
- Videoconference
- Open Forum
- Phone call

Do not default to email!

Add these into the mix:

- Videos
- Website or Microsite
- Newsletters – digital or print
- E-letters
- Presentations
- Print flyers
- Texts
- Signage, posters and banners
- Social media
- Blogs
- And of course, email

WHAT

What Content?

What Else?

Content Tips

- Say as much as you can
- Discuss not just the change, but also the impacts to them, and the plan to help them through the transition
- Express new benefits, but also "avoided pain"
- Tailor the depth of detail to your audience
- Give them a voice
 - Surveys
 - Open Forums
 - Live Polls
- Tell them what to do (next steps)

What you must say is WHY

WHY

"Why"
Questions

You must address:

- Why is this change happening?
- Why is it important?
- How is it connected to the mission?
- Why should I care?

Remember the Tussling
Tapers?

WHEN

Project Timeline

Change Acceptance Timeframe

Tips About Timing

- Say what you know now, and when you will know more
- Keep information flowing consistently
- Communicate changes to the plan as they happen
- Communicating over time allows you to break big messages into bite-sized pieces
- Repeat messages 5-7 times

The Kubler-Ross Change Curve and Communication Strategies

HOW

Transparency

Empathy

Authenticity

Trust

Transparency

"We're sharing this with you"

"This is what we know at this point"

"We made an error"

Empathy

"I understand"

"I'm sorry this is hard on you"

"We support you"

Authenticity

"They're just putting a happy face on this."

Transparency +
Empathy + Authenticity =
Trust

Preparing For a Successful Change Journey

Key Points

Your Questions?

Thank You

Key Points

1. Have a solid communications strategy
2. Understand your audience and their point of view
3. Communicate early and consistently
4. Explain WHY the change is happening
5. Be authentic to build trust

Judy DeVine
Communications Manager
California State University, Office of the Chancellor
jdevine@calstate.edu